DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE
This house is located at 536 Antietam Drive, Hagerstown, Maryland. It is situated on the east side of the road and faces west. The structure is a three-bay one-and-a-half story log dwelling house covered with artificial red brick siding. The construction of the walls, which are set on low, roughly coursed fieldstone foundations, is concealed by the siding. The windows are placed at random in the front elevation and are trimmed with plain flat architraves. They contain modern single-pane aluminum sashes. The main entrance is located in the north bay of the front elevation and is similar in appearance to the windows. The roof is covered with corrugated sheet metal and terminates with a plain barge board set directly against the end walls. A small brick flue rises from inside the structure near the center of the ridge. The house is in good condition and stands on a tract containing 24.85 acres.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The area of significance of this house is its architecture.

Although its original appearance has been altered, it is an example of a log dwelling which probably dates from after 1850. Thus, it reflects the persistence of an early vernacular building method well into the 19th century. According to local historians, this house and several others similar to it were built as company-owned houses by the paper mill which operated at Security from about 1865 to 1929.

The village of Security is also known as Bissel and as Fiddlersburg, a name which is said to have originated from a number of older men, who lived in the village during the late 19th century and who played their fiddles on summer evenings.

Several dated examples of Washington County's 18th century stone dwellings are located in Security.
